

Danielle Martin

Liberal Candidate for University—Rosedale

Dr. Danielle Martin is a family physician and health care leader with deep roots in University—Rosedale. She has spent two decades caring for patients in her family medicine practice, serving as Executive Vice-President at Women's College Hospital, and leading the Department of Family and Community Medicine at the University of Toronto, the largest academic department of family medicine in the world.

Throughout her career as a hospital executive, university leader and health advocate, Danielle has led major initiatives to improve health care for Canadian families. She has extensive experience advising governments on health care policy and is the author of a national bestselling book on health care in Canada. She holds a Master's degree in Public Policy from the University of Toronto and has continued to train and support the next generation by teaching family medicine, health policy and leadership.

In 2014, Danielle appeared before a United States Senate subcommittee, earning widespread recognition for her remarks about Canada's public health care system. In 2019, she became the youngest physician to receive the F.N.G. Starr Award, the highest honour of the Canadian Medical Association.

Beyond her professional contributions, Danielle has also served on various community boards, including the Wellesley Institute and Humber River Hospital as well as Canadian Doctors for Medicare, which she founded and led for many years.

As the next Member of Parliament for University—Rosedale, Danielle will be a strong advocate for people across the riding. She is ready to work with Mark Carney and the Liberal team to build a stronger economy, protect the vital programs workers and families rely on, and empower Canadians with more affordable living costs and more opportunities to get ahead.
